THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Mr. Sumner offered a resolution instituting the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the conduct of the Civil War, to extend its operations so that when the residents of any State, being citizens of the United States, should be denied the right to vote, the same should be addressed to it.

Mr. Sumner said he had informed that Vice-President Johnson should be addressed to it.

Mr. Sumner said the Constitution made the Vice-President the President to all intents and purposes.

Mr. Howard regarded the phraseology of his colleague with suspicion.

Mr. Sumner said that in the history of the entire proceedings of the Senate, no resolution could be more appropriate than that of Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Sumner agreed with Mr. Connesses to the joint resolution of the Senate, which gave authority to the appointment of a Commissioner to inquire into the conduct of the Civil War, to extend its operations so that when the residents of any State, being citizens of the United States, should be denied the right to vote, the same should be addressed to it.

Mr. Sumner said I think that this resolution is very important at this time. If the President had not authority to make such a resolution, it would be a usurpation of power by the Executive.

Mr. Sumner said that the action of the Senate in this regard is a wise one.

Mr. Sumner said I think the Indians on the Committee should make an early resolution.

Mr. Sumner said I think that this resolution is very important at this time. If the President had not authority to make such a resolution, it would be a usurpation of power by the Executive.
